Foundational supports survey

Children and Young People with Disability Australia

About this book

This book is from Children and Young People with Disability Australia or CYDA.

This book has some hard words.

Hard words are bold.

We tell you what hard words mean.

You can ask someone to help you read this book.

This book is about our survey.

A survey is when you

- answer questions

- share your ideas.

We want to hear from

- disabled young people

- parents or carers of disabled young people.

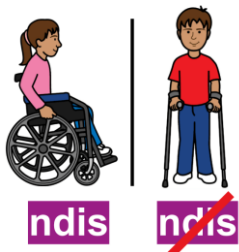

Foundational supports

The survey is about foundational supports.

Foundational supports are for disabled people.

There will be 2 types of foundational supports.

The 2 types of foundational supports will be general foundational supports and targeted foundational supports.

General foundational supports are for

- disabled people

- family and carers of disabled people

People who are on the NDIS can use general supports.

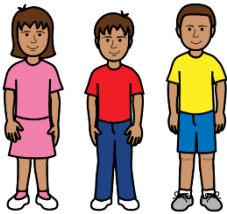

Targeted foundational supports are for disabled people who are not on the NDIS.

Targeted supports are for people who need help with different things.

For example, targeted supports can be for people with developmental delay.

Developmental delay is when it is hard for a child to do things that other children can do.

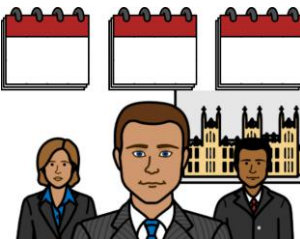

For example, a child might need help to walk.

The government wants to hear from you about general supports.

The government will start to ask about targeted supports in October.

You will have a few months to tell the government what you think about targeted supports.

This survey is about general supports.

What we will ask

1. We will ask about you.

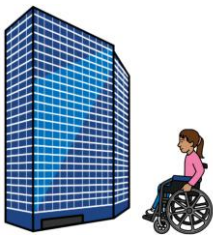

You can say you

- are a person with disability

- are a parent or carer of a person with disability

- work for a disability organisation.

You can also say you

- work for the government

- do research at a university.
